STARVING $15,000

Pfight of Two Alaska Prospectors Who Had Plenty of Gold Dust and Offored it for a Meal.

Mining the glittering gold successes fully on a claim and then transport ing it to some bank or semy office seems to be a task fraught with many difficulties for the Alaska minez. Wird has just been received from Hatelin, Alasks, of the exciting experience of H. Parsons and A. Hill, two prospec tors, who nearly starved to death with $15,000 in gold dust in their posses-

Parsons and Hill had made a nice clean-up on their claims at Yakatage and decided to take their gold to the bank at Katalla. Leaving Yakatage in a dary, they proceeded as far as Seal river, where they encountered a dense fog. Fearing they might be blown to sea, they landed at the mouth of the river. As the fog cleared a storm came, causing a heavy surf which smashed their dory and destroyed the greater part of the provisions.

The gold dust had been carefully packed ashore, but the men were miles from any camp, and their only hope of reaching civilization was a march of miles over rough country and the swimming of glacter rivers or perchance a passing fisherulan might pick they up.

After waiting several days for some chance relief, their scant food supply gave out and they were compelled to make the mush to Kennuck island. which was accomplished by swimming several glacier rivers and depending on wild strawberries for food. An indian canoe was obtained at Kenmack. in which the men made the remainder of the trip to Katalla.

Throughout the trip the men clung to the gold dust, but declared they would have given it all for a bont and a square meal many times during the trip to Kennuck Island.

HE PRACTISES LAW BY EAR

Flerce Butler's Retort to the Super ellious Question of a College Man In a Chicago Club.

Pierce Butler, special counsel for the government in the blenched flour cases, according to his own description of himself, is but a plain, rough-necked Irishman who grabbed his knowledge of law between times while making a living by other kinds of work. When he went into the prosecution of the flour cases he met up with a large number of university lawyers any chemists. While they were all dining at the Chicago club one evening the university men began telling stories about their boys at Yale, Harvard, Princeton and other places where Butler had never been

"Ah, by the way, Mr. Butler," asked one of the high brows with appropriate university accent, "of what school are you a graduate?"

"Not any," said Butler; "I just practies law by ear."

Rutler thinks the time of the black leter lose pretense in tre professions and science is past. In cross-examinining one of the high brow chemists he wanted to know something more about a proposition in chemistry the witness had laid down.

"Well, realty, Mr. Butler," said the chemist in a superior sort of way, "you see this is a matter of involved incrganic chemistry and I doubt wh I can explain it so that you can up

"Um-well, suppose you give me the benefit of the doubt," said Butler.

New the Grewless Warship. A new type of warship, invented by Mesers. Wirth, Beck & Knauss of Nuremberg, is causing a great senzation in navel stations. All the movements of the new vessel can be controlled from a land etation many miles distant.

During recent experiments at Dutasadteich a 30-foot boat was made to go forward, backward, turn in a circle and Ore mines and torpedoes, all its opera tions being directed from the shore. Nobody was on board the boat.

Representatives of foreign maya powers are negotiating with the inventore. Experts predict a great future for the new craft.-New York

His Conclusion. Claude Grahame White, the English awtator, praised, at a dinner in New Fork, the American stage. Your plays are livelier than ours." he said. 'Our plays are very dull and stupid. A novelist said to me one night at the Automobile club in London: "I have written several plays and they have all been rejected. So I do roted last month to a study of the Lonson theater. I took in every play in town. I was resolved to get a lot of points on the English stage. 'And did you learn much?' said I. " 'Well,' said the novelist, moodily, "I came to the conclusion that I'm the only man alive who can't get a poor play put on."

Barcelona.

Barorious is divided, for administrative purposes, into the old Barcelone of the Middle Agus and the new Barcelona, with its wide streets and beautiful residences. The public works of the old and new parts are intrusted to separate Spanish officials and paid for out of separate funds. and the problems are entirely distinct. In the new town the sum of $6,500,000 to being expended on a sewerage system, while the old town is mediaeval in this as in other respects, and even has a bit of sewer built in Roman reached for her checkbook .- Puck. HOW DAY ENDS IN DESERT

When the Sun Sets the Colors in the Sky and Earth Are Almost Too Beautiful for Description.

A fitting close to a day of songhirds and flowers is a desert subset! The Calleo mountains to the north first annumber the day's decline. Late to the afternoon its rents and gashes become minners of purple chadow, strikingly nutlined by the expected sunfit stretches which are gradually shoushed until the whole mointain is dult and lifetees When the sun is low, the regred range to the couthwest is thave with a rosy. glow varying from a dull pink to a deep rose, into which a purple gradually blends till it subface all the brightness and the purple, is turn, changes to him. As the sun sinks cut of sight the tight clouds in the east become softly pink, the code spending around to the morni, and finally conterlug in the west, where the clouds are makers of burnished gold, which mange into a brilliant ross telor. Sens seween the pright county and the horizon to a stretch of section a secwith a hint of yellow light shines through; and always, in living cose a desert sunset, you will sor the soft sirwer the ground and bear the low sall f the dove. When the brightness has faded and the him has major in and banished the red you draw a deep breath and feel yourself a part of the peace and quiet of the sky.
